III. GENERAL INFORMATION ON COOKIES

What Are Cookies?

7. Cookies are small files stored in the browser on Your device (e.g. computer, tablet, mobile phone) when You visit specific Websites.
8. Cookies enable the storage of data such as: login details (IP address, login time, which other website referred You to the Websites, etc.), browser type, as well as data on Your browsing activity on the website (e.g. which sections You visit, which services You are interested in, etc.).

What Are Cookies Used For?

9. Main purposes of using cookies:
   9.1. to ensure the technical functioning of the Websites, i.e., that they operate properly;
   9.2. to save Your settings during and between Your visits;

9.3. to improve the speed and security of the Websites;
9.4. to continuously improve our Websites so that they are even more user-friendly for You, enabling You to find the information You need regarding the services provided by the Company quickly and intuitively;
9.5. to make the marketing of the Company more effective so that we can offer content that is useful to You;
9.6. to track visitor traffic to our Websites.

What Types of Cookies Are There?

10. There can be persistent and session cookies. Persistent cookies remain on your computer after You leave the website and are used the next time You visit; they remain valid and are not deleted when You finish browsing the website. Session cookies are those that are deleted once You have finished browsing the website; in other words, these cookies are stored when You open a browser window and expire when You close the browser window.

11. Cookies are generally classified according to their function into strictly necessary, functional, performance and targeting cookies:

11.1. Strictly necessary cookies. These cookies are essential for the Websites to function. For example, they enable us to ensure that pages load quickly and efficiently, to determine whether You consent to the use of cookies at all, and, if so, when You give this consent and how long it remains valid, and so on. Without these cookies, the Websites cannot function properly.

11.2. Functional cookies. These cookies allow us to save Your preferences (such as language) and ensure that the Websites offer a better and more personalised experience (e.g. by customising a particular webpage in terms of text size, font and other page elements that You can adjust), also to enable the relevant features to work (e.g. a virtual assistant).

11.3. Performance cookies. These cookies collect information about how You use the Websites and help us enhance their performance. For example, these cookies may show which pages on the Websites You visit most frequently, how long You spend on a page, and which services You use. These cookies collect information about Your activity on our Websites, usually without identifying You personally.

11.4. Targeting cookies. These cookies are used to enable us to show You advertisements that are more relevant to You and better suited to Your interests; to limit the number of times You may see the same advertisement on the Websites, and to measure the effectiveness of advertising campaigns by tracking Your clicks. Advertisements may not be displayed on the Websites, but they may still be shown to you even after you have left the Websites. These cookies collect information for marketing purposes and track Your activity not only on the Websites but also on other web pages.

Transfer of Data to Third Parties

12. Cookies can also be categorised as first-party cookies and third-party cookies. A third-party cookie is created by another company (e.g. Google, Facebook, etc.). Some of these companies, such as Google and Facebook, may process cookie data outside the European Union or the European Economic Area. We would like to note that on 10 July 2023, the European Commission adopted an ‘adequacy decision’ regarding data transfers to the US. It approved the EU-US Privacy Shield Framework, under which the transfer of personal data between EU entities and certified US entities is permitted. The current list of certified US entities is available at dataprivacyframework.gov/list. We sometimes use such cookies on our Websites in order to obtain the necessary performance data, data required for marketing purposes, to enable social sharing functions, and so on. In such cases, these third parties may also obtain information from these cookies and may use such information for their own purposes; they may also obtain more information than we intended for our own purposes (for example, by linking the information they receive from us with information they have obtained from other websites). Third-party cookies may also be used to ensure the functioning of certain optional features on the Website (e.g. a virtual assistant). In the cookie banner displayed on our Websites, we have provided a description of the purposes for which we use such cookies. If You consent to the use of cookies, we consider that You have given Your consent to the transfer of data to third parties, as required by Article 49(1) of the General Data Protection Regulation. However, the activities and purposes for which those third parties may use the information obtained from these cookies or tracking mechanisms are governed by their own privacy policies or cookie policies.

13. We recommend that You review the privacy policies and/or cookie policies of each of our third parties, or any other information relating to these topics. For example:
